SIXTH ANNUAL ACADEMIC CONVOCATION

Dr. James T. Amsler, President of Salem State College, delivered the College's Academic Convocation address on September 26. In his remarks, Amsler enlisted the help of the College community in developing a new Five-Year Plan. It is expected that the plan will focus on the attainment of University status. Besides addressing enrollment issues, Amsler touched on other factors important to attaining university status. Specifically he mentioned the following areas: the library, the faculty, academic programs and the college's fiscal status. "In order to qualify for university status', stated Amsler, "Salem State's library, which presently has 210,000 volumes, must increase its holdings to between 300,000 to 350,000; faculty must do more research and writing; and Graduate programs must be increased along with appropriate number of graduate faculty to support full-time graduate students.' A restructuring of the College into schools or divisions would also be a necessity as would a university budget.

In addition to Amsler's address, Convocation highlights also included the bestowing of the Departmental Award for Academic and Scholarly Achievement and recognition of faculty members with over 25 years of service to the college.

The academic convocation was initiated by President Amsler in 1980 to recognize and reward academic excellence at the faculty and departmental levels and to set a scholarly tone for students and faculty early in the school year via their participation in the processional with full academic regalia — Courtesy of External Affairs.

On October 10, 1985, Program Council held its first Pub Nite of the semester. Two up and coming local bands, New Man and The Schemers, invaded Salem State College for a night of good music and dancing.

First up were the Schemers, a Rhode Island band, who riled the crowd with their gritty but danceable style of rock-n-roll. Their set featured college hits of 1985, "Valley of Love" and "I Want Some Fun". Both of these tunes helped the band to win the WBCN Rock-n-Roll Rumble in 1984.

Around 10:30, Boston's newest sensation, New Man bounded onstage with their energetic dance music. From their MTV Basement tapes winner and local hit "Bad Boys" to other standouts "Maria", "You Make Me Feel", "Video" and "Beaver Patrol", the five piece band kept the crowd dancing non-stop. Their combination of pop, funk, and pure total energy onstage created an original pleasing sound.

Both bands seemed to be having a great time, and their enthusiasm rubbed off on the crowd, who also had a good time despite the lack of alcohol. Needless to say, Program Council's first Pub Nite of the semester was a smashing sucess.

HURRICANE GLORIA

By Donna Pitman

On Wednesday, September 25, 1985, the possiblity of Hurricane Gloria delivering her wrath to Massachusetts was being debated by meterologists throughout the New England area. She was still at sea and gaining in strength. Should she come ashore, substantial damage and hazardous conditions would result. News Bulletins were posted often and the atmosphere was one of growing concern. Thursday morning came and went with little increase in an expected course for Gloria, as did Thursday afternoon. It was not until the eve of September 26, that the dark clouds of realization began to hang over the heads of meterologists. Gloria would assume one of three courses. The third would leave Massachusetts in the center of her path. Hurricane warnings flashed across television screens and radio airways. Friday morning came in with the fog, warnings from the previous evening turned to declarations. Gloria, the architect of disaster, had begun her doom in the Boston area. Radio and television bulletins announced school closings, advised securing fly-away objects, saving water and enacting previously discussed precautionary measures. In the early dawn hours of September 27, Governor Michael Dukakis declared a State of Emergency for Massachusetts. Emergency shelters were set up and coastline evacuations encouraged. Gloria came with forceful winds, rain and some flooding. Many trees were sent to their death, murdered by her high winds. Waiting endlessly indoors for the oncoming gales and destruction proved rather fruitless. It seemed that Mother Nature and her wrath had tricked us again. Gloria was done and over with in a matter of hours. She took along time getting here, giving us a full two days with which to grow concerned. She did leave memories behing her, for some a tree, for some lack of electricity, while others, well let's just say memories.

Bob Keeshan, well known for his role as "Captain Kangaroo," lectured on "Growing Up In America: The Effects of Television on America's Youth" on Tuesday, December 10.

Mr. Keeshan's TV career began when he worked as a network page in New York. He left his job to join the Marines during World War II, and after being discharged he returned to his page-boy job and met Bob Smith of "Howdy Doody" fame. Smith hired Keeshan as an assistant, and from that evolved Keeshan's first TV role, Clarabelle the Clown. After five years Keeshan left for "Time For Fun" and a new character, Corny the Clown. A year later, in 1954, he created and played Tinker the Toymaker on "Tinker's Workshop."

In 1955 Keeshan created Captain Kangaroo, the character for which he is most famous. The show ran for 30 years, making it the longest running children's show on network television.

Since then Keehsan Associates have produced numerous TV and radio shows, the most recent being "CBS Storybreak," which presents original adaptions of literature for young children. Kesshan and his programs have been honored innumerable times, including the bestowing of several Emmy and Gabriel Awards. Keeshan was named Broadcaster of the Year by International Radio and Television Society in 1979. He was named the 1980 Television Father of the Year. Keeshan has been presented with honorary degrees from 13 colleges.

The lecture was presented by the Lecture & Forum Committee of the Program Council.

This year Salem State PIRG, the Public Interest Research Group has been working hard to get 6,000 signatures on four bills. These include a bill to reduce the sulfur emissions that produce acid rain, a bill to find and clean hazardous waste dump sites, a bill to form a consumer utilities board to monitor rate hikes by the utility companies, and a bill for mail-in voter registration. MASSPIRG members have petitioned in the Commons, at local supermarkets, and at the Topsfield Fair. Members also spoke in the classroom to get students involved in these important issues.

Salem State PIRG has aslo been raising money to eradicate hunger. The Hunger Project is a year long project which is intended to help local communities find aid for the hungry. Salem State PIRG's most current project is a small claims hotline where consumers can get information on legal issues.

The Reverend Jesse L. Jackson delivered the final lecture of the 1985-86 Salem State College Lecture Series on April 2 at 8 p.m. in the O'Keefe Sports Complex. Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, kicked off the fourth annual program and ABC News White Correspondent Sam Donaldson followed last month.

Born on October 8, 1941 in Greenville, South Carolina, Jackson earned his B.A. in sociology and economics at North Carolina A&T State University (1964). It was during his college years that Jackson began to participate in student activist movements. He continued his studies at the Chicago Theological Seminary and was ordained a Baptist minister in 1968.

A protege of Martin Luther King, Jr., Jesse Jackson first attracted national attention through his work with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC). Jackson left the SCLC to found his own Operation PUSH — People United to Serve Humanity. His "PUSH For Excellence" program for students and parents is seen as one of the nation's most successful education projects, and his "PUSH For Economic Justice" endeavor resulted in multi-million dollar agreements with corporations like Coco-Cola, Anheuser-Busch and Southland.

Jackson won international recognition in November, 1983 when he begame the first black American to launch a serious campaign for the Democratic Party's presidential nomination. He was represented at the National Convention by 465 delegates and 61 congressional districts.

Although he was defeated, he did, via his campaign, organize a powerful voting force, The Rainbow Coalition. He has remained in the headlines by successfully negotiating different foreign policy situations, particularly his work with the Syrian government. His ability to deal with foreign officials has gained him respect of the governments and citizens alike. In 1985 the Gallup Poll of Americans ranked Jesse Jackson third on the list of the ten most admired men.

Larry Linville, who played the role of Major Frank Burns, spoke on the television production of M*A*S*H at Salem State College on April 16.

Linville, born in Ojai, California, attended the University of Colorado and majored in Aeronautical Engineering. His interest, however, in theatrical arts began in high school and continued after his graduation from college. He competed for openings with the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London and he not only was accepted but also given a scholarship.

After completing his training in London, Linvlle returned to the U.S. to join the A.P.A., a classical repertory company. During his five years with the company he appeared with the Barter Theater, San Diego Shakespeare Festival, McCarter Theater at Princeton and many others.

Linville started on broadway as an understudy in "Inadmissable Evidence" and later went on to make his debut in Eugene O'Neill's "More Stately Mansions starring Ingrid Bergman. His first television exposure was on an episode of Judd for the Defense and followed by appearances on Mannix, Bonanza, Mission Impossible, F.B.I. and the motion picture Kotch.

Linville's effectiveness in a part on "Room 22," led producer Gene Reynolds to offer him the role in M*A*S*H. Even though there was network resistance with the casting, Linvlle received the role of Major Frank Burns which became a comedy classic.

Since M*A*S*H, Linville has appeared in the Rockford Files, Fantasy Island and in the starring role in the feature film "School Spirit." He also received critical acclaim in the U.S. and Canada in the Plays "A Thousand Clowns" and "Twice Around."

The lecture was sponsored by the Lecture and & Forum Committee of the Program Council.

MARK MATHABANE
Speaks At S.S.C.

Mark Mathabane, a native of South Africa, spoke on Growing Up in Apartheid South Africa on April 10 at Salem State College.

Mathabane lived his boyhood in the shantytown of Alexandra, 10 miles away from Johannesburg where he struggled to survive the physical and emotional torture that almost drove him to suicide.

Through the help of Arthur Ashe and Stan Smith, Mathabane came to this country on a tennis scholarship and later published Kaffir Boy, an autobiography describing his account of growing up black in his country.

Mr. Mathabane is now 25 years old and resides in New York City, but his family remains in South Africa.

SENIOR AWARDS BANQUET

Salem State College honored students and members of the college staff at its annual Senior Awards Banquet held at the Eastern Yatch Club in Marblehead. Hosted by the Student Services division and the Class of 1986, the banquet was attended by members of the Board of Trustees, College Administration and Faculty and friends and families of the honored students.

Eight students received Silver Key awards; Holly A. Brennan, Pamela Denning, Denice Guanci, Lisa A. Johnson, Joan Lombardi, Judi Marraffa and Susan Snider.

The Silver Key award is presented to those seniors who have a cumulative grade point average over 3.0, combined with proven involvement in his/her area of academic concentration and demostration of leadership in co-curricular activities within the College community.

In addition, Special Recognition awards were presented to four students: Charles Bragg, Donna E. Fitzpatrick, Michele Letourneau and Scott J. Simmons. The Special Recognition award is presented to those seniors who have been actively involved within their academic discipline and who have exhibited leadership in co-curricular activities within the college community.

Two members of the College staff received special recognition from the Class of 1986 for their outstanding contributions to the quality of student life. The recipients were Professor William R. Dolan, Jr. and Mrs. Florence Barry.

The 1986 yearbook was dedicated to retired Assistant Dean, William D. Devitt in recognition of his service and contributions to students throughout his career. The Yearbook also selected Ms. Suzanne N. Roach to receive special mention in the 1986 Clipper.

Fifteen students were included in the 1986 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." The editors of the annual directory, through nominations from college campus committees, have included these outstanding students based on their academic achievement, community service, leadership in extracurricular activities, and potential for continued success. The 15 join an elite group of students from more than 1,500 institutions of higher learning. Recipients were Joseph G. Caisse, Lisa J. Campbell, Michael D. Campbell, James R. Doucette, Lisa Ferrara, Donna Fitzpatrick, Steven Malley, David Moniz, Mary N. O'Neill, David J. Paier, Diane L. Parker, Kelly L. Powers, Gregory L. Pray, Susan L. Snider, Richard B. Staples.

YEARBOOK DEDICATION

WILLIAM D. DEVITT

This year's yearbook is dedicated to William D. Devitt, for his help, concern and support of the students of Salem State College. Dean Devitt retired in December after serving the College community for over twenty-five years. He served in various positions ranging from Professor of Mathematics, Director of Admissions, Director of Institutional Research to Associate Dean of Academic Affairs. His contributions to the students of Salem State College are endless, and he will be greatly missed.

SPECIAL RECOGNITION

SUZANNE N. ROACH

This year the yearbook staff decided to recognize an individual who contributed a great deal to student activities. This years recipient works behind the scenes with a great variety of students. She works in an advisory capcity to the largest student programming body on campus, the Program Council. She offers not only her advice, but also her time and genuine support. She works with over a dozen separate student coordinators, who are responsible for scheduling most of the programming on campus — ranging from Pub Nite and Senior Week to Arts Festival and Scarborough Fair and everything in between. To these programs, she brings her knowledge, dedication and compassion. She made it possible for Salem State College students to attend a NACA regional convention for the first time in years. The students who attended the convention brought back an increased knowledge of leadership and programming, which they passed on to the community. Although she has only been at Salem State College a short time, her contributions to the community are outstanding, and it is my honor to present the 1986 Clipper Special Recognition Award to Suzanne Roach.

This year's yearbook represents many things to different people. To me it represents many long hours of work. But it also represents a wonderful growing experience. I worked hard, learned a great deal, made new friends and had a good experience that I will always remember. I cherish my new friendships and I hope they will endure as the yearbook itself will. Seniors, (and I quote from Bonnie Johnson's graduation speech) ". . . the Class of 1986 has come to rely upon each other, and we all realise that as we leave Salem State College we will leave behind many good friends, roommates, teammates, and classmates. When each of us first attended Salem State College we brought with us our own ideas and beliefs which we soon began to share with our classmates. As we continued our education at Salem, we met new friends and educators who helped us grow as individuals. We must now leave Salem State and those people who we have come to rely upon and care about, but we should always remember the good times we've shared. It is now time for us to move on to brighter futures to which we can all look forward. We all will leave Salem with our own set of beliefs, values, attitudes and goals, although there is one common bond between us. We are all part of the Salem State College's Class of 1986. With this bond we can still remain a part of this college as we begin to lead our lifes . . . Congratulations Class of 1986"

It is with this I leave you . . . Goodbye and good luck!!!
